MARKET COMMENTARY

March proved a challenging month for Australian fixed income, as geopolitical turmoil in the Middle East dominated sentiment and forced a significant repricing of the rate outlook. The US-Israel conflict with Iran effectively closed the Strait of Hormuz — a chokepoint for roughly 20% of global oil supply — sending oil prices sharply higher and reigniting stagflation concerns. The war created volatility across energy, rates, equities and credit markets as inflation was re-priced, as was central bank paths and recession risks.

Against this backdrop, the RBA delivered a 0.25% rate hike, albeit on a narrow 5–4 vote, reinforcing its view that the economy has been running above potential and that inflation remains uncomfortably elevated. The decision was framed as a response to pre-existing domestic inflationary pressures rather than the oil shock directly, though the two are difficult to disentangle. Australian government bond yields moved sharply higher across the curve. Market pricing for the end-2026 cash rate peaked near 4.8% — around 2.5 additional hikes — up sharply from February's close. With Q1 CPI due ahead of the May RBA meeting — where markets are currently pricing a 60% probability of another hike to 4.35% — volatility looks set to persist into April.

Domestic credit spreads widened materially over the month reflecting uncertain economic and geopolitical conditions alongside rising concerns around the private credit sector. Higher beta sectors including subordinated major banks widened more sharply.

Primary market issuance paused briefly following the commencement of strikes in Iran before resuming albeit at a lower volume than previous months. Securitisation activity dominated deal flow, contributing to pressure on spreads as the market digested robust volumes in an uncertain economic climate.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

Duration was the key detractor from performance over the month. Bond yields moved higher along the curve, impacting absolute performance. This was partially offset by curve positioning and active duration management over the month. The Fund ended the month marginally below the 2-year strategic target. The relatively short strategic target duration mitigates the impact of rising bond yields, while allowing the Manager to express duration positions and participate in rallies.

Income return was the most substantial contributor to performance over the month partially offsetting the impact on rising bond yields. The Fund continues to collect a healthy running yield generated from the underlying fixed rate and floating rate income strategies alongside direct investments. The Fund's running income remains led by domestic and offshore banks, RMBS and non-financial corporates. The portfolio running yield was 4.8% at month end.

Credit spread widening was the key determinant of relative performance over the period. Allocation to higher beta sectors including domestic bank subordinated and offshore bank hybrid positions detracted from performance. Securitised sectors also saw widening reflecting supply factors alongside the broader risk off market dynamic although this was offset by the strong running yield.

The outlook for credit remains negative reflecting uncertain geopolitical, economic and monetary policy factors. In these conditions risk management remains paramount. The Manager remains focused on identifying relative value opportunities presented by the current conditions and will continue to look for active duration opportunities along the curve.

OUTLOOK

The credit outlook declined in March to end the month with a strong negative reading.

Valuation indicators neutral despite spread widening across AU investment grade, US Investment Grade and US High Yield. The disruption of primary markets as a result of the war in Iran and associated uncertainty saw decline in opportunistic issuance. AUD credit is still offering reasonable relative value.

The ongoing Middle East conflict remains the key driver of the macroeconomic outlook. Even if traffic through the Strait of Hormuz normalizes, damage to production infrastructure is expected to limit supply recovery and sustained high oil prices will slow global growth. The ratio of upgrades to downgrades remains in positive territory despite the uncertain economic and monetary policy outlook.

Market demand has been impacted by the geopolitical volatility with persistent selling observed and buyers predominantly active at discounted levels with bid depth inconsistent. Year to date issuance remains elevated despite the easing observed in March.

Technical indicators have worsened contributing to the negative credit outlook. While cash balances among real money accounts have increased and dealer inventories remain neutral, US credit, Equity and Equity volatility indicators are all marginally negative.
