MARKET COMMENTARY

Financial markets strengthened through June with credit, bonds and equities posting gains. Softening economic data eased concerns around ongoing inflation pressure globally, supporting risk assets.

Domestic long term bond yields rallied over the month with 10-year bond yield falling 10 bps. The Yield curve flattened however with shortened (1-3y) yields rising reflecting successive above consensus expectation monthly inflation prints. Q2 CPI will be crucial for understanding the path of monetary policy with futures markets shifting during June to price an 50% chance of another increase at the August meeting by month end. The RBA elected to maintain the cash rate at the June meeting however their commentary was increasingly hawkish.

Domestic credit spreads traded in range of recent levels grinding marginally tighter throughout the month. Financials outperformed corporate, led by offshore banks. Semi government spreads performed well, tightening materially over the month.

Primary issuance was relatively light in June reflecting seasonal factors including end of financial year. Issuance typically eases towards the end of June and dynamic was exacerbated by the late month release of above expectation monthly inflation data. Earlier in June, ANZ raised $4.25B in senior debt across multiple fixed and floating tranches. Elsewhere, primary market volumes were supported by robust securitisation flow. Lastly, during June the Commonwealth government issued their inaugural green bond in a $7B 10-year deal.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

Credit spread dynamics were mixed for performance during the month. Domestic spreads traded in range of recent levels and spread contraction among AUD denominated positions was marginally positive for relative return. The portfolio was impacted however by expanding EUR spreads which rose sharply in early June (as a result of the surprise snap elections called in France) before ending the month higher (as strong polling for the far-right National Rally party escalated concerns around rising government debt and deficits). The portfolio maintains exposure to a number of EUR denominated securities which continue to offer attractive yields. Opportunities in foreign denominated credit have proven very fruitful over the past 12 months with USD and EUR denominated comprising a number of the top contributing positions over the period. Note that foreign currency and interest rate risks are hedged.

The impact of offshore spread widening was more than offset by the contribution of the Fund's healthy yield premium above benchmark. The Fund continues to collect a robust running income with the yield premium contributing more than 250bps of outperformance over the past fiscal year. The portfolio's running yield was 6.1% at month end, with the spread (credit yield premium) measured at 1.6%.

Sector and capital structure risks were actively rotated during the month. The Manager took the opportunity to lock in profits on a number of subordinated domestic bank and financial positions following an extended period of strong performance. Subordinated spreads remain attractive relative to hybrids and at month end, the fund held 41.9% in subordinated paper down from 53.2%. Elsewhere, non-conforming RMBS exposures were trimmed while increasing allocation to a prime RMBS from AFG in primary and increasing auto ABS allocation via a new deal from Liberty. The Fund also took part in new deals from the government owned Australian Rail Track Corp and offshore bank BMO.

The outlook for credit remains delicately poised. The Manager continues to look for attractively priced issues and relative value opportunities while carefully managing credit and liquidity risks.

OUTLOOK

The credit outlook remained consistent throughout June and continues to offer a neutral overall score.

Valuation indicators improved over the latter half of the month with AUD swap and basis swap levels normalising. At month end, each of the value indicators were in neutral territory, remaining in range of recent and historic averages.

Our macro-outlook remains marginally positive. Lending conditions as expressed by the Senior Loan Officer survey remain negative. Meanwhile, access to equity market capital and the ratio of credit rating upgrades to downgrades remain supportive.

Supply and demand indicators remain neutral. Elevated upcoming maturity volumes in the near term are constructive however this support is expected to dissipate over the remainder of the year as maturity volumes decline. Recent supply has been strong and while demand has matched the level of issuance thus far, the volume of year to date primary issuance is weighing on the outlook.

Technical indicators declined during the month offering a neutral score by month end. Cash balances among real money accounts are below recent levels, reflecting the busy issuance schedule thus far in 2024. US equity and equity volatility indicators continue to support the outlook.
